

WORLD WAR TWO PROGRAM REVIEW

Kirkland Library

"The performance was live and quite good. It was done by a singer and a pianist. She was much more than a singer though. She was also a very gifted interpreter of the era, an ethnomusicologist. Besides the uniformed period dress, look to the left of the photo and see the camera and radio of the 1930-1940s. There were other memorabilia behind on the table as well. The audience was an intergenerational group of some 40-50 people that gave great response throughout the 55 minutes performance. She and her pianist seemed to have perfect interpretive synchronization in musical nuance . My guess is they probably have a long performance history together." -Walter Barbee 9/20/08
